Annual infrared inspections are the most cost-effective way to identify fatigue and faulty electrical components. They reduce failures, downtime, and increase reliability & profitability.

Utilizing infrared scanning on an annual basis for electrical and mechanical systems can reduce failures and downtime, improve reliability of these systems and increase profitability.

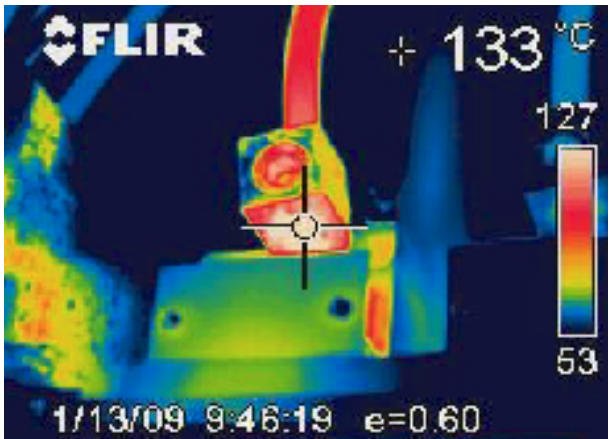

Infrared inspections are performed while the plant is running and it is the most cost-effective way to identify fatigue and faulty electrical components.

TDS Infrared Services' reports establish a baseline, of your equipment, from which degradation can be measured on an annual basis.
